Paterra pushes for more cops

Charleroi mayor renews call to increase the size of the Magic City's police department in the wake of weekend murder.

By CHRIS BUCKLEY

Staff Writer
cbuckley@tribweb.com

CHARLEROI - As the Magic City deals with a homicide in its community, Mayor Frank Paterra on Thursday reiterated his request that council prioritize the borough budget to increase the size of the police department.

Not commenting directly to Paterra's request, board members instead took time during their monthly meeting to praise the efforts of the police department and other agencies for making a quick arrest in the weekend murder.

"This is difficult to state, but we need to make serious cuts in the budget and give me a compliment of police officers to fight the war on drugs," Paterra said.

Paterra said the $2,358,840 budget includes $738,492 for police. He asked council to increase the budget for police to $1,179,420 - 50 percent of the total spending plan.

Paterra said the department consists of five full-time officers and a superintendent. He said the borough had 12 full-time officers and a chief in 1981 and nine officers and a chief as recently as 1996.

"The public demands that our community be secured," Paterra said. "Our senior citizens and our children must be protected from the drug community. I want all illegal drugs out of Charleroi and Speers."

"I appeal to all of you to consider my requests. I know this is difficult and people will be laid off and jobs will be eliminated, but we must attack this cancer that plagues our community in the form of illegal drugs."

No members of council responded to his request during or after Paterra spoke.

But they eventually took turns praising authorities for the way the investigation into the murder of Amanda Faux was handled.

Her nude body was found Sunday evening in a dumpster in an alley near the apartment she moved into the previous day with her boyfriend, Joseph John Natale.

Natale, 28, of 213 Fifth St., Apt. 3G, was charged Tuesday with one count each of criminal homicide, aggravated assault and abuse of a corpse.

Natale surrendered to state police Tuesday evening. His father, an Elizabeth resident, drove him to the barracks in Rostraver Township.

Natale is being held in the Washington County Correctional Facility without bond.

Resident Darlene Pennline told council that the mayor and some residents warned them (See PATERRA, Page 2A)

Snacks popular at Farm Show

Snacks and other foods manufactured in Pennsylvania are among the favorite attractions at the annual exposition that ends today.

HARRISBURG - Bob Stahl outlines his marketing strategy from a folding canvas director's chair in his booth at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, where thousands of people cluster in front of product display tables for free bites of beef jerky, chocolate, pretzels and cheese.

Stahl wants the 69-cent Club Sandwich - a mouth-watering concoction made from creamy peanut butter sandwiched between two crackers and smothered in chocolate - to be the most popular candy bar in Pottsville, the headquarters of his 12-employee company, Costas Candy.

Then, he wants that distinction throughout Schuylkill County, and after that, he wants to expand the circle to take in surrounding counties and spread across the state.

"It's very hard to do that as a small company, so that's why I'm here," Stahl said, scanning the denim-and flannel-clad crowd. "You're not going to find this on your pillow at the Hilton Hotel like a luxury chocolate. You're going to find it in your lunch box."

"These are my people."

Snacks and other foods manufactured in Pennsylvania are among the favorite attractions this week at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, an annual exposition that showcases agriculture, the state's leading industry. More than 400,000 people are expected to visit the event that features hundreds of homegrown products, livestock, entertainment, youth competitions and exhibitions.

Stahl, a former director of product development for Hershey Foods, understands from more than 30 years of experience in the candy business that whether it's chips, crackers or chocolate, people love their goodies in Pennsylvania.

"Hershey and the Mars Candy Co. started it, probably because there's a lot of dairy products available. Pennsylvania has a lot of agricultural diversity, but it seems as though chocolate and snacks are what we do best," he said.

Although the Keystone State is known jokingly as the "snack food capital of the world," there are statistics to prove it.

Donora approves extra fee for sewers

Annual $20 surcharge will help pay for future repairs.

By JEFF OLIVER

Staff Writer
joliver@tribweb.com

DONORA - Because of the antiquated condition of the borough's sewer lines, residents will be assessed a $20 annual surcharge to help pay for future maintenance and repairs.

At Thursday's meeting of borough council, Councilman Jason Menendez said that the sewer system, which is approximately 110 years old, is deteriorating and in great need of repairs and updating.

However, the borough does not have the money needed to pay for such repairs.

Currently the sewer lines are owned by the borough, but the sewage is treated by the Mon Valley Sewage Authority.

A similar situation exists in Monessen.

The two communities have been in negotiations with the sewage authority to come up with a way to take care of the system, up to and including having the authority take over ownership.

Menendez said that the surcharge was agreed upon by Donora council. Monessen officials still are considering the fee. A $5 cost will be added to each quarterly bill for residents to cover the surcharge.

"This is the first step in a long process in dealing with the sewer issue and continuing negotiations with Mon Valley Sewage," Menendez said.

"We hope that this fee agreed upon will not be too much of a burden on the residents of Donora and Monessen while we also understand that any surcharge is too much."

Menendez noted that it is a rather unusual situation that exists with the borough and Monessen each owning the sewer lines and having the sewage authority maintaining them.

"There are escalating costs and escalating problems with the lines, which are very old and in dire need of being repaired," Menendez said.

Assessment position perks quite appealing

Members of Westmoreland County's Board of Assessment Appeals make $51,000 per year and can show up for work as often or as seldom as they like.

By RICH CHOLODOFSKY

Members of Westmoreland County's Board of Assessment Appeals - who make more than $51,000 a year - can show up for work as often or as seldom as they like.

And two returning members of the board took full advantage of that policy last year, according to records obtained by the Tribune-Review.

Records indicate long-time board member John Wilt took nearly 12 weeks of paid vacation in 2007, and board Chairwoman Barbara Mofe took more than eight weeks.

Ousted board member Deborah Chiado, the lone Republican who was fired by county commissioners this week, took about five weeks of vacation last year, records show.

The board members are appointed by county commissioners to four-year terms and have the same benefits as elected officials, with no limit on vacation and sick days, Mofe said.

But they stand in sharp contrast to their seven part-time counterparts in Allegheny County, who each were paid up to $9,000 a year to handle more than 7,000 cases, nearly six times more than the number of appeals Westmoreland County board members handled. The Allegheny County board members get no paid vacation and are compensated based on the number of meetings they attend, with 27 meetings scheduled for 2008.

Allegheny County paid about $200,000 last year for case reviewers and hearing officers, who investigate assessment appeals and hear evidence, said Mike Suley, the manager of the Office of Property Assessments.

Westmoreland County Commissioner Tom Balya said he has no problem with the setup.

"We don't look at their vacation time. As far as (See ASSESSMENT, Page 2A) that, if more police were not added to the department, something like the homicide would occur in Charleroi.

But Council President Mark Alterici called Faux death "an isolated case," and told Pennline using the girl's death as a "soapbox" is wrong.

"We trying to work with the mayor," Alterici said, turning toward Pattera as he spoke.

Later in the meeting, council member Nancy Ellis acknowledged "the great job" Charleroi police as well as various other agencies did in the investigation that culminated in an arrest just two days after the body was discovered.

"I think we have a great police department and I think they're doing a great job," Ellis said.

She thanked Det. Lt. Jim Disanti for the hours he put into the investigation.

Councilman Ken Laird also recognized Disanti.

Police Superintendent Mike Matyas recognized the efforts of part-time officers Jamen Walker and Jamie Holland in the hours right after the body was discovered. Councilman Jerry Jericho also commended Disanti.

Council would later accept Disanti's resignation from the force for retirement, effective July 5.

In other business, council approved an application for a grant from the new Washington County Local Share Account, developed from the proceeds for gaming. Charleroi Community Development Corporation member Adele Hopkins said the organization hopes to use the grant to complete phase II of the Meadowcrest housing development.

Council also appointed Larry P. Celaschi to a five-year term on the water authority and Terry Newstrom to a five-year term to the planning commission.

The board accepted the resignation of Don Ruschak from the Mid-Mon Valley Transit Authority Board. Applications for this position will be accepted until noon Feb. 6.

The board approved advertising for bids to complete the 10th Street stormwater separation project.

Borough Manager Bob Hodgson said borough residents will not be assessed any additional fees for the cost of that work.

Resident Greg Spada told council he has been bitten twice and harassed on other occasions by pit bulldogs he said are roaming the community.

Matyas vowed to look into the problem and said he previously cited a resident for not controlling a pit bull.

He said that resident has since left the community.

The superintendent offered to walk the community with Spada to search for any pit bulls running loose.

The Food Marketing Cooperative of Pennsylvania reports that the state -- where 2,300 food companies have headquarters -- leads the nation in total snack food sales by generating $5.1 billion annually. The state produces more pretzels and potato chips annually than any other, according to the state Bureau of Market Development.

Stahl and many of the food producers who have brought their wares to the show are part of the PA Preferred program, which identifies locally grown or processed items that meet strict food safety standards.

Many cater to local markets, while others are names familiar to everyone's table -- Musselman's Apple Sauce, Pennsylvania Dutchman mushrooms, Snyder's potato chips, Meadowland Farms beef, Hatfield hams, Lucky Leaf apple juice.

Those and other agricultural products are pushing Pennsylvania to the forefront in many areas, according to the state Department of Agriculture.

The state leads the nation in mushroom production, with 465 million pounds harvested annually. It ranks first in the number of Christmas tree farms, with 2,164, and first in the production of hardwood lumber, with 1.1 billion board-feet per year.

Meat, poultry and fish industries generate more than $4.3 million in sales annually in Pennsylvania, which ranks third in egg production, with 6.75 billion eggs, and fifth for trout harvesting, with 1.68 million pounds processed each year.

To the state's producers, the numbers are a source of pride as they talk with show visitors.

"Our meats are produced in Pennsylvania and sold fresh here," said Eric Haman, a spokesman for Hatfield Quality Meats, a firm that employs 1,600 people at its headquarters about 30 miles northwest of Philadelphia.

"We have a lot to do with the 4-H and Future Farmers of America. We're local and we try to give back to them by supporting them."

Many of the PA Preferred growers say they enjoy the show because they participated in 4-H and other agricultural groups as children.

Some are fourth- and fifth-generation farmers and food producers.

Carol Nicklaus is a fourth-generation pretzel maker for Hammond's Pretzel Bakery, a 20-employee Lancaster company that sells about 300,000 pounds of pretzels each year.

Well, not exactly. Nicklaus handles the office work for the company started in 1931, but never learned to make the sourdough pretzels from the secret recipe perfected by her great-grandfather, grandfather and father.

"I can't make them. My kids make pretzels and my husband makes them, but I've always been too busy doing other things," said Nicklaus, who is selling pretzels in large orange and green tins for her fourth year at the Farm Show.

"Right now, the fifth generation -- my son and daughter -- are taking over the business."

That being the case, she said, Hammond's will remain small, with sales dedicated to a regional market in Lancaster and York counties and mail orders.

Although the state Department of Agriculture reports that agricultural exports are increasing each year, it appears that often what is made in Pennsylvania tends to stay in Pennsylvania.

Beekeeper Brenda Aucker, a spokeswoman for the Pennsylvania State Beekeeper's Association, said most of the honey producers across the state cater to local markets and sell their products -- clover, wildflower and buckwheat honey, soaps, candles and lip balms -- at roadside stands and farmers markets.

"Very little is exported. The majority of honey produced here stays here," she said.

Assessment (FROM PAGE ONE)

I'm concerned, they're not required to document their vacation. As far as I know there is no problem with them conducting hearings. I think we've got capable people," Balya said.

But Barry Kauffman, executive director of Common Cause of Pennsylvania, said, "Citizens have a right to accountability, especially when they (board members) are reimbursed generously."

"It's not unreasonable for the people of Westmoreland County to demand standard working hours and performance standards. I'm kind of surprised they aren't required," Kauffman said.

The assessment board is required to meet at least six times a year to pass judgment on properties seeking exemptions from paying taxes.

The board also is required to conduct hearings on property assessment appeals.

Those are conducted throughout September and October. Westmoreland County last conducted a countywide reassessment in 1972.

Wilt, who last year recorded 59 vacation days, said his work schedule was justified, in part because his salary was cut in 2000.

"I had to take a pay cut in 2000. Because of that, I take more vacation," said Wilt, an assessment board member since 1983.

Until 2000, county policy limited vacation and sick days for assessment board members. Time off was determined by years of service.

But that year, county commissioners decided the board members no longer were traditional county employees subject to the policies governing those workers.

As a result, board members were granted unlimited vacation time and sick leave. They receive traditional county medical and retirement benefits.

Wilt said his salary, which at the time was in the mid-$50,000 range, was cut to about $45,000.

Wilt took off 53 days in 2002; 58 in 2003; 51 in 2004; 33 in 2005; and 50 in 2006.

Records indicate Mofte took 41 vacation days last year and averaged about 40 days off over the last six years.

But Wilt said he gives 100 percent when on the job.

"It's up to your personal traits and integrity to be on the job when you have to be on the job," Wilt said. "I do not abuse it."

There are no set criteria for selecting board members, but all three members worked in the county assessment office.

Mofte said board members are required to spend a lot of personal time working on cases. She said she is out of the office a good portion of the year viewing properties. She could not document her time on site visits.

"At least one of our three board members is always here. We're not mandated to be here. My job is to make sure we're here for the appeals system," Mofte said.

Under state law, counties such as Westmoreland are mandated to appoint assessment board members to hear appeal cases. Those board members do not have to serve full time, but they must be independent from the county commissioners.

But all three board members have political ties to the Democratic county commissioners, Balya and Tom Ceraso.

Wilt, a longtime Democratic supporter, last year donated $200 to Balya's campaign. Newly appointed board member William Ferraro gave more than $800 in the last year to Ceraso's and Balya's re-election bids. Mofte gave $325 to the Democrats' campaign. Ousted board member Chido gave $325 to Balya and Ceraso.

Ceraso would not comment on the matter.

In Memory Of

Geraldine J. Allen

A Birthday Tribute today, January 11, in loving memory of our beloved mother, Geraldine J. Allen. She passed away 7 years ago, October 28, 2000. Every day in some way, memories of you come our way. Though absent you are always near, still loved, still missed & ever dear. Beautiful memories are wonderful things, they last through the longest day. They never wear out, they never get lost, and can never be given away. Though by some you may be forgotten, and to others a part of the past, but for us who loved and lost you, your memory will always last. Sadly missed and loved by the Allen Family.

U.S. commander in Iraq laud bombing campaign

Effort allowed American soldiers to push into areas where they have not been in years.

By BRADLEY BROOKS

Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — One of the largest bombing campaigns of the war destroyed extremists' "defensive belts" south of Baghdad, allowing American soldiers to push into areas where they have not been in years, a top commander said today.

The day before, two B-1B bombers and four F-16 fighter jets dropped 48 precision-guided bombs on 47 targets, U.S. Air Force Col. Peter Donnelly, commander of the 18th Expeditionary Air Support Operations Group, told reporters in Baghdad.

The targets consisted mainly of weapons caches and powerful roadside bombs buried deep underground — key defensive elements for al-Qaida in Iraq insurgents, said Donnelly and Army Col. Terry Ferrell, commander of the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division.

Extremists were believed to have controlled Arab Jabour, a Sunni district lined with citrus groves, but Ferrell said "the predominant number" have now fled to the southwest since his troops' operations began Jan. 1.

"We're moving into areas where coalition forces have not been in months or years in some cases," Ferrell told reporters via a video link, adding that insurgents "had established a deliberate defensive belt to deny our movement in the area."

Ferrell said the southwest is "where we take this fight to next. It is all about fighting the enemy where the enemy wants to go."

As U.S. and Iraqi ground forces move through areas to push out insurgents, Ferrell said members of the so-called "Awakening Council" movement will be relied upon to stabilize the region.

WORLD BRIEFLY

Bush tours biblical sites

SEA OF GALILEE, Israel (AP) — After two days immersed in the intense and arcane world of Mideast peacemaking, President Bush today toured holy sites, listening as robed clerics read him biblical passages about Jesus' days of ministry there centuries ago.

Bush visited Capernaum, a site where Jesus is said to have performed miracles.

The president later gazed across the Sea of Galilee where, Jesus is claimed to have walked on water.

He toured the site of an ancient synagogue and joked and held hands with nuns outside the Church of the Beatitudes, a place where Jesus delivered his famed "Sermon on the Mount."

Asked how it felt about the opportunity to walk in Jesus' footsteps, Bush replied "Amazing experience."

Unpaid bills impact FBI wiretaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Telephone companies have cut off FBI wiretaps used to eavesdrop on suspected criminals because of the bureau's repeated failures to pay phone bills on time.

A Justice Department audit released Thursday blamed the lost connections on the FBI's lax oversight of money used in undercover investigations. In one office alone, unpaid costs for wiretaps from one phone company totaled $66,000.

In at least one case, a wiretap used in a Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act investigation "was halted due to untimely payment," the audit found.

Wiretaps conducted under that legislation reportedly are used in the federal government's most sensitive and secretive criminal and intelligence investigations, and allow eavesdropping on suspected terrorists or spies.

OUR OPINION

Calendars are more wasted money

AFTER THE 2005 PAY RAISE fiasco, we were promised that a new day had arrived in Pennsylvania politics.

But that new day can't be found on any of the nearly 300,000 self-promoting calendars that General Assembly members recently had printed at taxpayer expense.

It cost the state $131,000 — roughly three times the median household income for Pennsylvanians — to produce the slick, full-color calendars, which are sent free of charge to certain constituents.

Although this year's edition celebrates state natives who became American military heroes, each calendar also features a photo of the House or Senate member who distributed it.

Senate Republican spokesman Erik Arneson defended the calendars as "one of many informational materials made available to constituents." His Democratic counterpart, Charlie Tocci, notes that the calendars contain "no politically motivated material."

Both miss the point of the objections being raised by the anti-calendar crowd. After the 2005 taxpayer revolt forced the pay raise to be overturned, we were promised that Harrisburg was going to be more careful with our money.

Pennsylvania taxpayers have gone through decades of watching state funds being wasted on perks, promotional materials and other frivolous items.

Our hero in this latest dispute is Sen. John Eichelberger, a Republican from Blair County, who was the only senator to refuse his allotted 1,000 calendars.

"They said, 'You don't understand. You get these calendars at no cost to you,'" Eichelberger explained. "And I said 'No, you don't understand. They cost the taxpayers. I don't want them.'"

That attitude — not a calendar or some other silly trinket — is the gift we really need from our state leaders.

ANOTHER VIEW

The (Harrisburg) Patriot-News on changes to the Pennsylvania Legislature:

Some 55 Pennsylvania state lawmakers chose to retire or were defeated at the polls in November 2006. With the next election 10 months away, 18 additional lawmakers have announced retirement plans, with likely more to come.

That means that in the course of two years more than a quarter of the seats in General Assembly will be held by newcomers, with possibly more than a third replaced with fresh blood after this November.

This raises a salient question: Is there a tipping point when there are enough sitting "reformers" to actually produce a serious overhaul of the Legislature? Or do the reformers, after a few years on the job, become comfortable with their role as part of the ruling elite and defenders of the usual way of doing things?

If it is the latter, legislative reform amounts to a dog trying to catch its tail, which is to say there is much spinning and ruckus, but not much else.

We are not so cynical as to have given up hope on reform. We note that important internal changes have been made, but the broader reform effort — aside from a serious move to improve access to public records and a smoking ban — has been pretty invisible.

We keep looking for that moment of reformist synergy, for that tipping point in the balance of power that will finally deliver the kind of representative government people hunger for.

Earth contains finite resources

The Earth is finite. All of the natural resources on it are also finite. That means if we keep using these resources at the current rates, we will eventually move from more to less to none. That will be an evil day for the human race.

Perpetual growth is a myth. The belief that technology can overcome scarcity is a superstition. The belief that the growth of the human population is not a problem is an example of denial. The Earth has a finite carrying capacity. When we exceed that, very bad things begin to happen. There is probably even a tipping point beyond which recovery is impossible.

There is no medical cure for starvation, and all that is necessary for starvation to start killing people is for the price of food to rise beyond their means. Whenever there have been famines, there has always been food somewhere in the world. It just wasn't available or affordable to the people who were dying. Depending on altruism is putting your hopes in a

Since human life absolutely depends on food and clean water, you would think that agriculture would receive more attention than it does. The past few administrations have seemed to think that subsidies to corporate agribusinesses are all that is necessary.

But agriculture is a great deal more complex than the buying and selling of commodities. There is the matter of preserving the land and its fertility. There is the matter of producing food that is uncontaminated by chemical pesticides and herbicides. There is the matter of preserving access to water in the more arid areas. There is the matter of religious faith in free-market capitalism.

The value of the latter depends on what is meant by free-market capitalism.

Private ownership by an occupant who works the land and intends to preserve it for his heirs is a great system. Private ownership by an absentee corporation that intends to extract the maximum amount of profits in the shortest possible time without regard for the future is a bad system. Business expansion financed by savings and retained earnings is good; business expansion financed by loans and highly leveraged financial schemes is not so good.

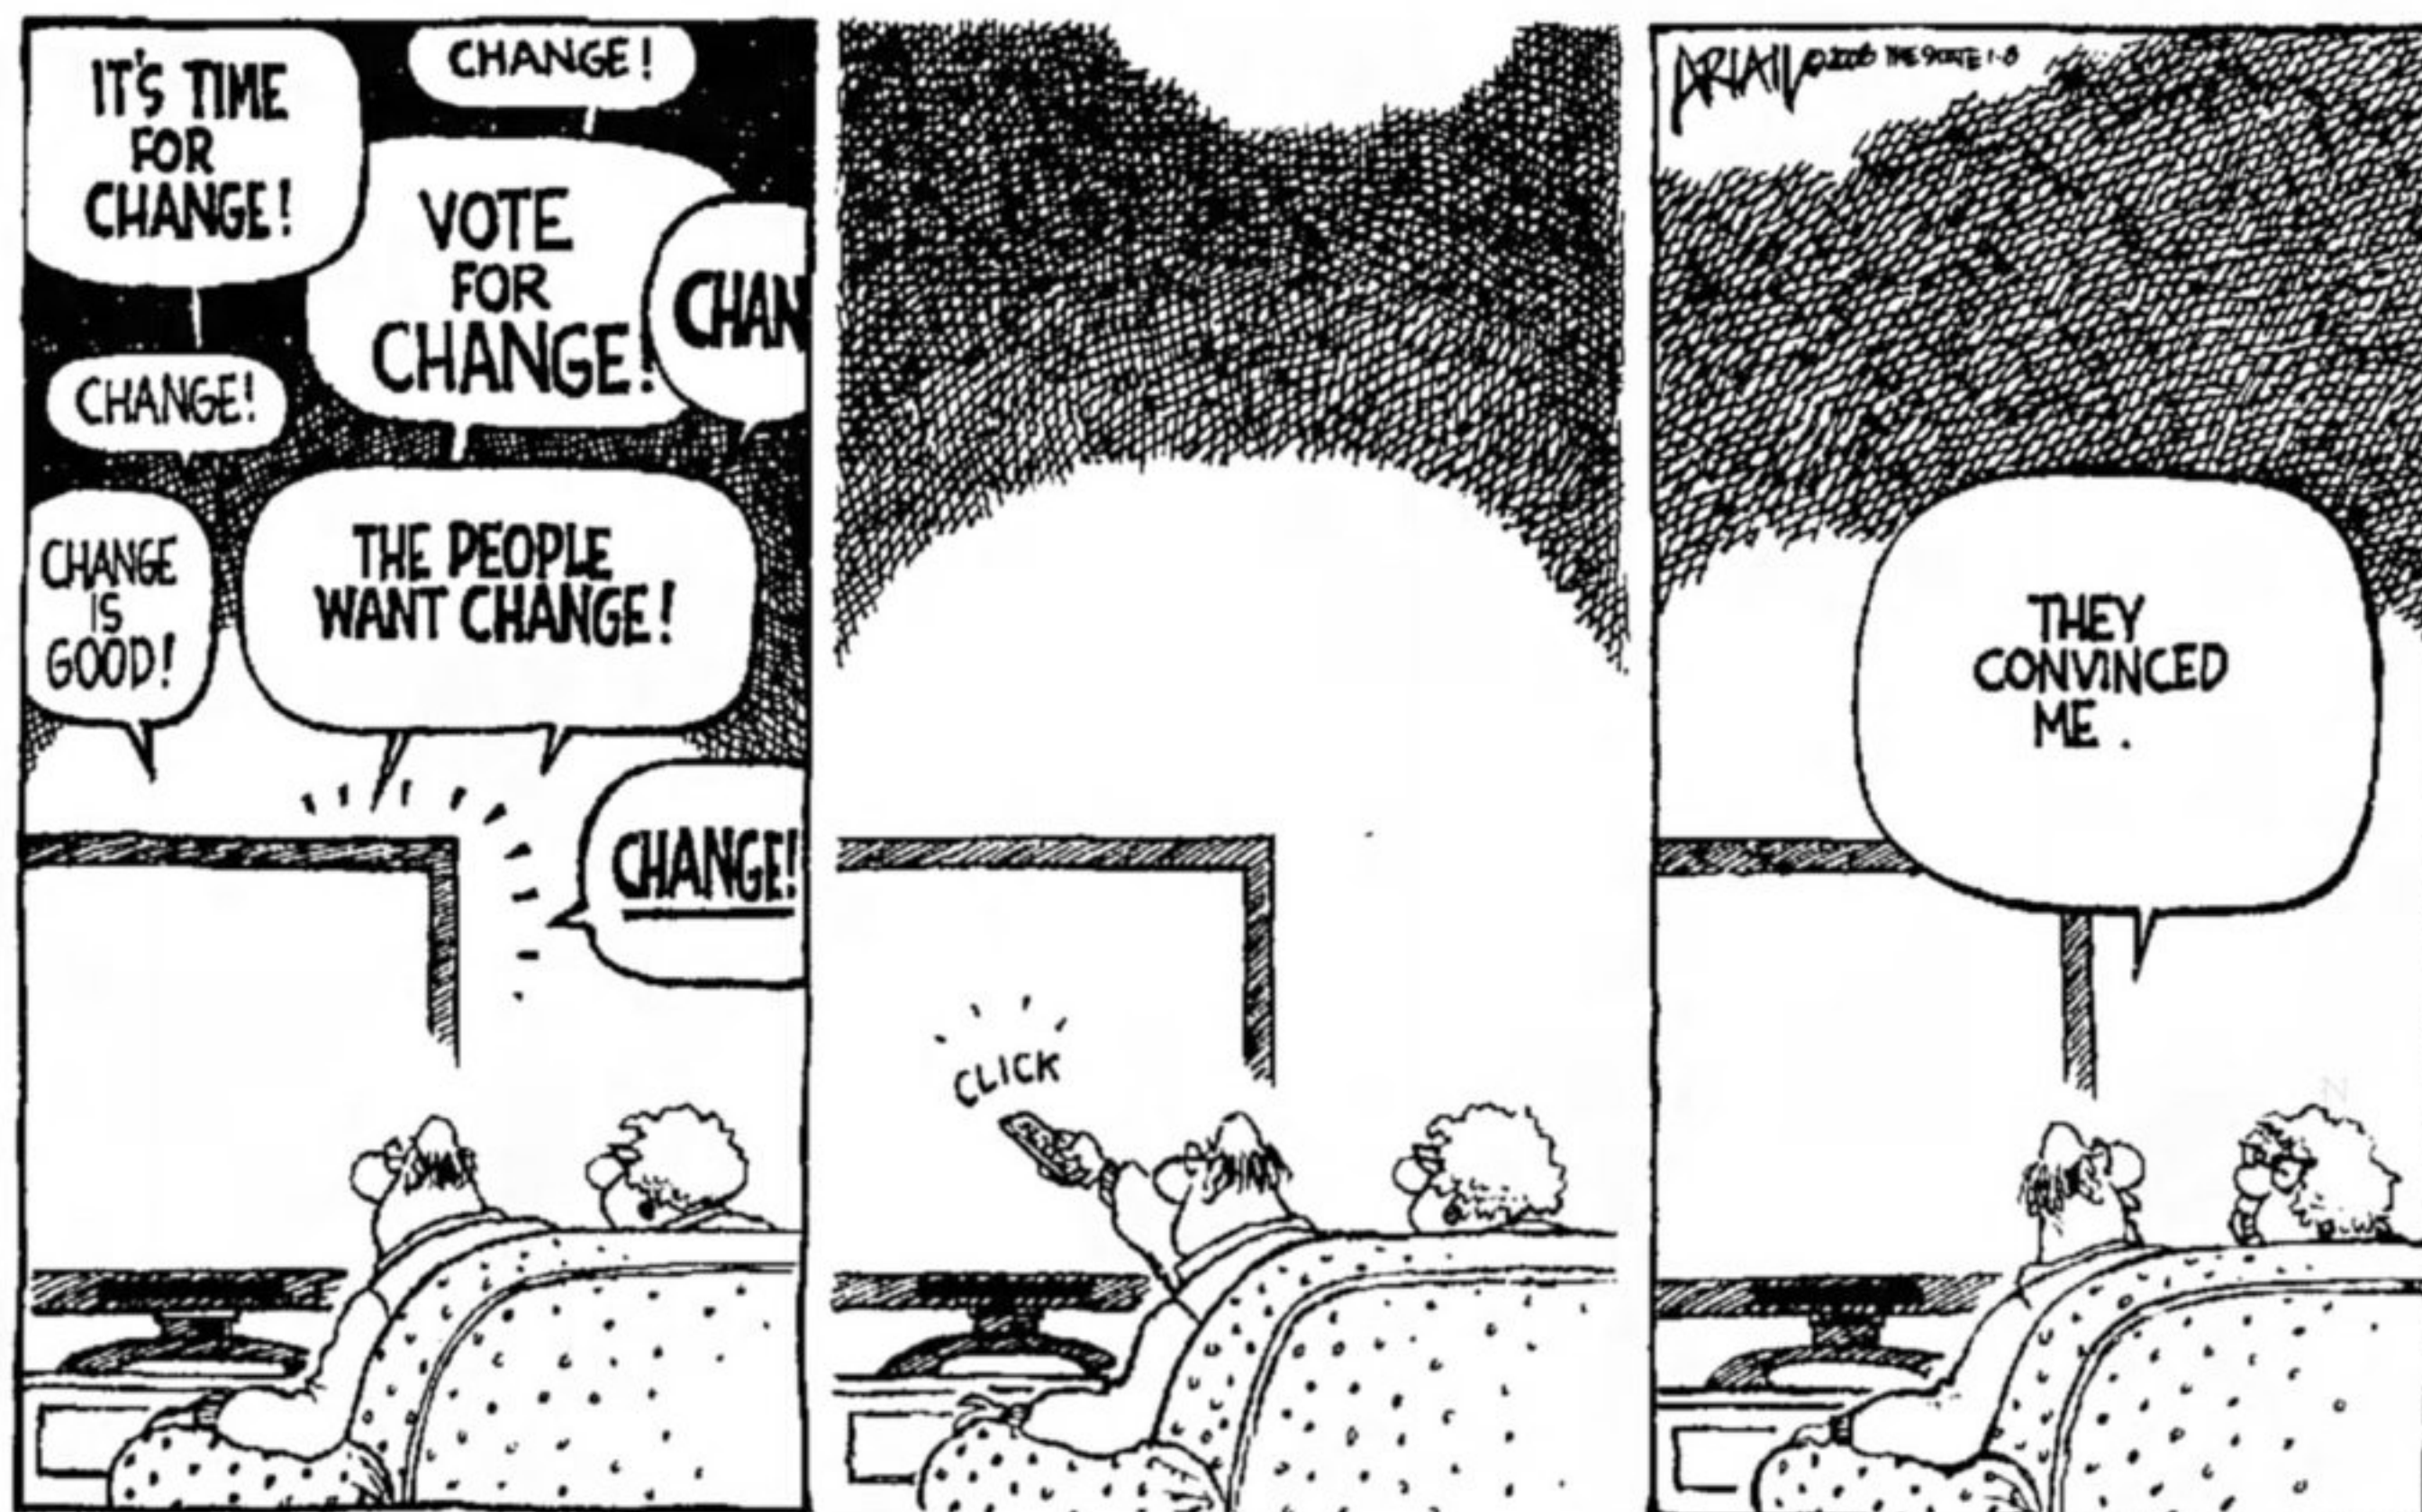

The theory that the selfish man working for his own profit "accidentally" creates benefits for others is much more limited than we are led to believe. To expect corporate executives to be good citizens and conservators is, with rare exceptions, to expect the highly unlikely. As an English clergyman once put it, the trouble with corporations is that they have neither a body to kick nor a soul to damn. All the pressure on the corporate executive is to make a profit and to boost the stock's value. The welfare of employees, who have been reduced to "human resources," is not a consideration. We are seeing more and more corporate executives willing to close their American plants and contract out their manufacturing to cheap-labor countries. This increases corporate profits, but it reduces the standard of living for Americans.

Private capitalists are notorious for demanding favors from communities in exchange for promises of jobs — promises that often are broken. They are equally notorious about shifting their costs onto the public. Substituting plastic and aluminum containers for reusable glass bottles is a prime example. Glass bottles were recycled by the manufacturer. Plastic and aluminum are recycled by the public or stored in public dumps.

Perhaps we should find some biologists to run for public office rather than lawyers and businessmen. Both the House and the Senate could stand a little juicing up of its average IQ and knowledge base.

Is America ready for a black president?

The sweeping victory of Barack Obama in Iowa's Democratic primary seems to have generated a kind of electric shock among political observers.

Suddenly it seems possible, allegedly for the first time, that a black candidate may actually be able to win a presidential nomination and then go on to take the White House in November.

Actually, it isn't all that novel an idea. As recently as 2000 it seemed entirely reasonable that Gen. Colin Powell might seek the Republican nomination, and receive it. And if he had, there were plenty of observers (the present writer among them) who thought he had an excellent chance of being elected president. It was reportedly only his wife's adamant opposition to the idea (she was convinced he would be assassinated) that prevented him from trying.

The idea of a black person becoming president of the United States, therefore, is no earth-shaking novelty. It is true that democracies tend to choose as their leaders people drawn from their dominant ethnic category, which in the case of the United States is still overwhelmingly white. But this is a notoriously pluralistic society, and black Americans have already made their mark in almost every aspect of public life, including both business and politics.

There have been innumerable black business executives and politicians — so many, in fact, that the possibility of a black president has been a reality for years.

What has prevented it from happening before now is a simple fact of political life: That voters tend to vote for candidates with whom they can, in some way, personally identify — someone of roughly the same political views (of course), the same economic background (a small businessman or whatever) or the same ethnic roots. There is nothing sinister about this, and the rule is subject to all sorts of saving exceptions.

What confronts us in the case of Obama, therefore, is not some unprecedented or unthinkable lesion in the political universe, but simply the incidental fact that he happens to be black, and that is hardly momentous. The real question with Obama, as with any serious contender for the presidency, is his qualifications for the job. And it is here, I submit, that he turns up seriously short.

His first political office was as an Illinois state senator — a post he held for eight years, from 1996 to 2004. He then won the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate, and was elected that November. He has served in the Senate for a little over two years. That is his entire record in public office, and on that basis he now seeks to become president of the United States.

What would we be thinking of Obama today, if he were white instead of black? Am I being hypercritical to suggest that such a record sounds like a pretty thin basis for a presidential campaign? Eight years in Springfield, Ill., and two in Washington?

Yet, because he has done well in the early presidential primaries, we are invited to disregard his anemic record. True, he has been running largely against

Democratic old-timers: Hillary Clinton, who has been a fixture on the Washington scene since 1992, and John Edwards, a former U.S. senator who is seeking his party's presidential nomination for the second time. But Obama has no significant achievements in Washington to his credit, and whatever he did for Illinois in its state senate in eight years can be left for the citizens of that state to contemplate.

In short, it's difficult to see anything in Obama's record that qualifies him for serious consideration as a presidential candidate, and we are left to conclude that his major asset is what we are all high-mindedly supposed to disregard in evaluating him: the fact that he is black. And that alone, I submit, is simply not enough.

Rebecca Cunningham says she's undecided about what course of college study to pursue. She hasn't narrowed down a major, although she's leaning toward travel tourism. She's also thinking about attending Gettysburg College.

So the 18-year-old Dunbar resident plans to take her English and computer classes along with other basic, required courses at Westmoreland County Community College's Fayette County Education Center.

"This is closer to my house and provides a lot of options," Cunningham said Thursday, the first day of classes at the new center in Unifontown.

In addition to building enough credits to transfer to a four-year college or university, students also have the option of getting an associate's degree.

Kate Frederick, 22, of Northern Cambria, Cambria County, is also attending the classes at the center because of the location. She's considering enrolling at Waynesburg University.

Marian Chambers, the coordinator of Westmoreland County Community College's new Fayette County Education Center in Unlontown, says plenty of space means the center is "just scratching the surface at the potential here."

some day to study elementary education.

The center has a distance-learning classroom where students can interact via video and audio with a classroom at another campus, a computer lab with 18 state-of-the-art computers, and two other classrooms with computer-based projectors for teachers, professional academic and financial aid providers.

There are also three computer stations and another that is handicapped-accessible to enable students to register.

There's a room for books that can be purchased online and shipped via college courier from the main campus near Youngwood to Fayette County.

"Our objective is to meet the students' needs," said Marian Chambers, the education center coordinator at the facility located at 140 N. Beeson Blvd.

"There are more opportunities for students," Chambers said. "It's very exciting."

Plans for the center include a reception area with a hired receptionist, a lounge area, and an office for faculty to meet with students one on one.

"We're just scratching the surface at the potential here," Chambers said of the section of the second floor that formerly housed the offices of the Fayette County Community Action Agency. "We really do have quite a bit of space."

Along with making much of the center handicapped-accessible, Chambers said they also cater to the needs of students taking an online course without a computer. "They can take their online courses at the center and nontraditional students can take a longer class one day or night a week to fit in with their work schedule."

With the start of the spring semester, enrollment stands at 112 students, surpassing the goal of 100. About 15 classes ranging from accounting and biology to human services and speech are available.

"Students can come here, get their education and save money," Chambers said. "It's important to help a student reach their dream."

Diary of a First Street Rambler

Learning experiences involve girls, God & hockey

Saturday,
March 13, 1948
Dear Diary,

Ralph E. STONE

Tomorrow is Sunday and I can't wait to go to my new Sunday school class again. About a month ago, I talked my mom into letting me go to the Methodist Church instead of the First United Presbyterian Church, where we always went.

I didn't tell her all the reasons why I wanted to change churches; I just told her part of the reasons.

The reason I didn't tell her about was that the Methodist Church has a whole bunch of pretty girls.

The reason I gave my mom was that Donny Jones went to church there, and he told me about all the activities they had at the Methodist Church for kids. Jonesy also told me that Denver Rhome was his teacher and that he was a real good Sunday school teacher.

Anyway, my mom knew there wasn't much for kids to do at the Presbyterian Church since Reverend Coleman left, so she said I could go to the Methodist Church.

Jonesy also told me about all the girls, but I didn't tell my mom that part!

Some of these girls include Mary Parkinson, Jo Ann Dawson, Joy Jones, the Kray sisters, Eileen and Joan, and a whole bunch of other really pretty girls. I get to look at all those pretty girls and have fun with Jonesy and the other guys, too.

Besides, there ain't hardly any girls at the Presbyterian Church since Reverend Coleman left.

Now the girls ain't in my Sunday school class 'cause they have the boys and girls separated. But we're all together at the opening of Sunday school and, if you stay for church, you get to see the girls again.

My mom told me I'd start liking younger girls and most of these girls are a grade or two behind me. Maybe mom is right 'cause I think they sure are pretty!

I ain't talking about girls though.

The thing I want to tell you about is my Sunday school teacher. His name is Denver Rhome and he's really a neat guy. He's a funeral director, so you might think he wouldn't be any fun, but that ain't true. He really makes our classes exciting, and he's probably the best teacher about Bible stuff since I had Reverend Coleman in summer Bible school.

Denver is real good at explaining things like why Jesus had to die on the cross and why it was so important that he rose from the dead.

We were studying about the resurrection in the Gospel of Mark.

Denver showed us from the Bible when Mary Magdalene and Mary, the mother of Jesus, went to visit his tomb and found the rock was rolled away and Jesus' body was gone. Instead, there was another guy there. I guess he was an angel.

Anyway, in Chapter 16, verse 6, this angel says "Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: He is risen: He is not here."

Denver told us that those three words, "He is risen," are the three most important words in the whole Bible.

He said that if Jesus didn't rise from the dead, he'd be like any other man.

He wouldn't be any different that guys like Confucius or Mohammed, who started other religions.

But because Jesus rose again, it showed that he was who he said he was, the Son of God. And that He and the Father were the same. Denver explained it real good to us.

Actually, I knew Denver a long time ago, because before he ever got his own funeral home up on McKee Avenue, he used to work for Mr. Woodward in his funeral home.

He told us himself to call him Denver. He said that Mr. Rhome was his father's name and that he was just plain, old Denver.

Anyway, Denver is funny and he makes everything we do and learn fun.

Last Saturday, he took the whole class, five of us, to a Pittsburgh Hornet's hockey game.

It was the first hockey game I ever saw.

Denver explained different things to us about the game. He explained what "icing" meant, and what the red and blue lines were for, and how offside in hockey is different from offside in football.

I still don't like hockey as much as baseball, basketball or football, but it is probably my fourth favorite sport now. It's really exciting, especially when they fight!

There were four really good fights in the game we saw. The best fight was this one with Baz Bastien. He's Pittsburgh's goalie and he made a lot of good saves.

Anyway, Baz really clobbered this guy from Providence who tried to push him into the goal.

By the way, we won, 3 to 2, but without Bastien we would probably have lost.

He's my favorite player and Les Costello, who's my second favorite player, scored two of our goals.

On the way back home, Denver used those hockey fights to tell us about a fight in the Bible that you probably heard about. It was when David, a little shepherd boy, laid out this big giant, Goliath, with a stone and a sling shot. Like I said, Denver makes EVERYTHING interesting.

Author's Notes:

Denver Rhome, as the story indicated, began his career as a mortician at the Woodward Funeral Home, at the corner of First Street and Schoonmaker Avenue. He later opened his own business at the far end of McKee Avenue on the corner of McKee Way.

As his business progressed, he eventually built the Rhome Funeral Home on Grand Boulevard, which still serves the communities of the Mid-Mon Valley.

Denver died several years ago, following a long bout with cancer. I spoke to him just a few weeks prior to his earthly departure, and he was confident of his eternal future through the faith he still had in those three words, "He is risen!"

He will always be one of the several positive role models who enhanced my childhood.

Today, his business is carried on by his son, David, and grandsons, Matthew and Chris.

I was recently hired as a greeter for Rhome's. The entire family faithfully reads these Rambler stories.

Chris presented me with an original "First Street" street sign. It stands in our family room as a proud reminder of my past.

The Pittsburgh Hornets were the Pittsburgh hockey team from 1936 through 1967, when they were replaced by the Penguins. It was long before the Civic Arena, so their games were played at the old Duquesne Gardens until they moved into the arena in 1961.

The Hornets were a minor league team who served the Toronto Maple Leafs. In addition to the goalie, Baz Bastien, and the leading goal scorer, Les Costello, a few other name players of that season included Fleming Mackell and Pete Langgells.

I still prefer the sports I grew up with, baseball, basketball and football!

Stranglehold

Monessen blasts Serra early and then coasts to 45-31 win to take control of Class A Sec. 3

First quarter blitz allows Lady Greyhounds to roll.

By BILL HUGHES
For The Valley Independent

MONESSEN - With 4:05 gone in Monessen's 45-31 win over Serra Catholic in their highly anticipated Class A Section 3 rematch, Serra coach Bill Cleary called a timeout.

How dominant was Monessen in that opening stretch?

Considering the nightmare he and his team had just faced, Cleary had to be hoping he was having a bad dream.

In that opening stretch, Monessen's defense was so tenacious that it forced the Lady Eagles into eight missed shots and four turnovers.

"We started so bad and their defense was superb," Cleary said. "(Christina) Chukwuedo did a good job of shutting down (point guard) Bria (Gwosden). She took Bria right out of the game."

"And once we fell behind early like that, we could not recover."

Monessen coach Major Corley was happy with what he saw defensively from his team in the opening minutes.

"That was some good, tough and strong defense," he said. "We wanted to make sure that they didn't get any good looks from three-point range."

Monessen (15-0, 6-0) played superb perimeter defense all night long as the Lady Eagles (7-4, 3-2) only hit one trifecta.

"That was our game plan," Corley said. "We did not want them getting hot."

Breanne Minardi opened the scoring with 5:38 left in the first quarter as she hit a pair of free throws and Monessen raced out to a 15-3 lead after eight minutes.

Monessen opened up its biggest lead of 19 points (24-5) with 5:58 left in the second quarter on an old-fashioned three-point play by Kelly Mornak.

Mornak, who needed 16 points to reach 1,000 for her career, finished with seven. She needs nine to reach the milestone. Monessen plays Saturday (2:30 p.m.) at Trinity Christian.

Monessen held a 29-13 lead at the half, but the momentum slowly changed to favor Serra in the third quarter.

The Lady Eagles trimmed the Monessen lead to eight (35-27) going into the fourth quarter but never threatened in the last eight minutes.

Corley noted the play of Melissa Popovich (10), Samone Stepoli (10) and Jessica Diggs (eight), who combined for 28 rebounds.

"They were able to play well and they controlled the inside," he said. "That was a key."

Cleary made no excuses and was gracious in defeat in his opinion of Monessen.

"They are athletic, very good and they force shots," he said. "They were able to spread the floor out and with the speed of their guards, they were able to drive off of the dribble."

"That is a very experienced team and they are very good."

The win gives Monessen a two-game cushion in the section race with four contests to go.

Considering that Monessen's remaining section opponents include Trinity Christian, Frazier, Clairton and Avella, it appears that the Lady Greyhounds will grab their first section title since 2004.

"It's time to get another one," Corley said with a smile after the game.

Corley also said that he was going back on a promise he made to the team.

"I am getting my hair trimmed," Corley said making note that he told the team he would not get it cut until the team lost.

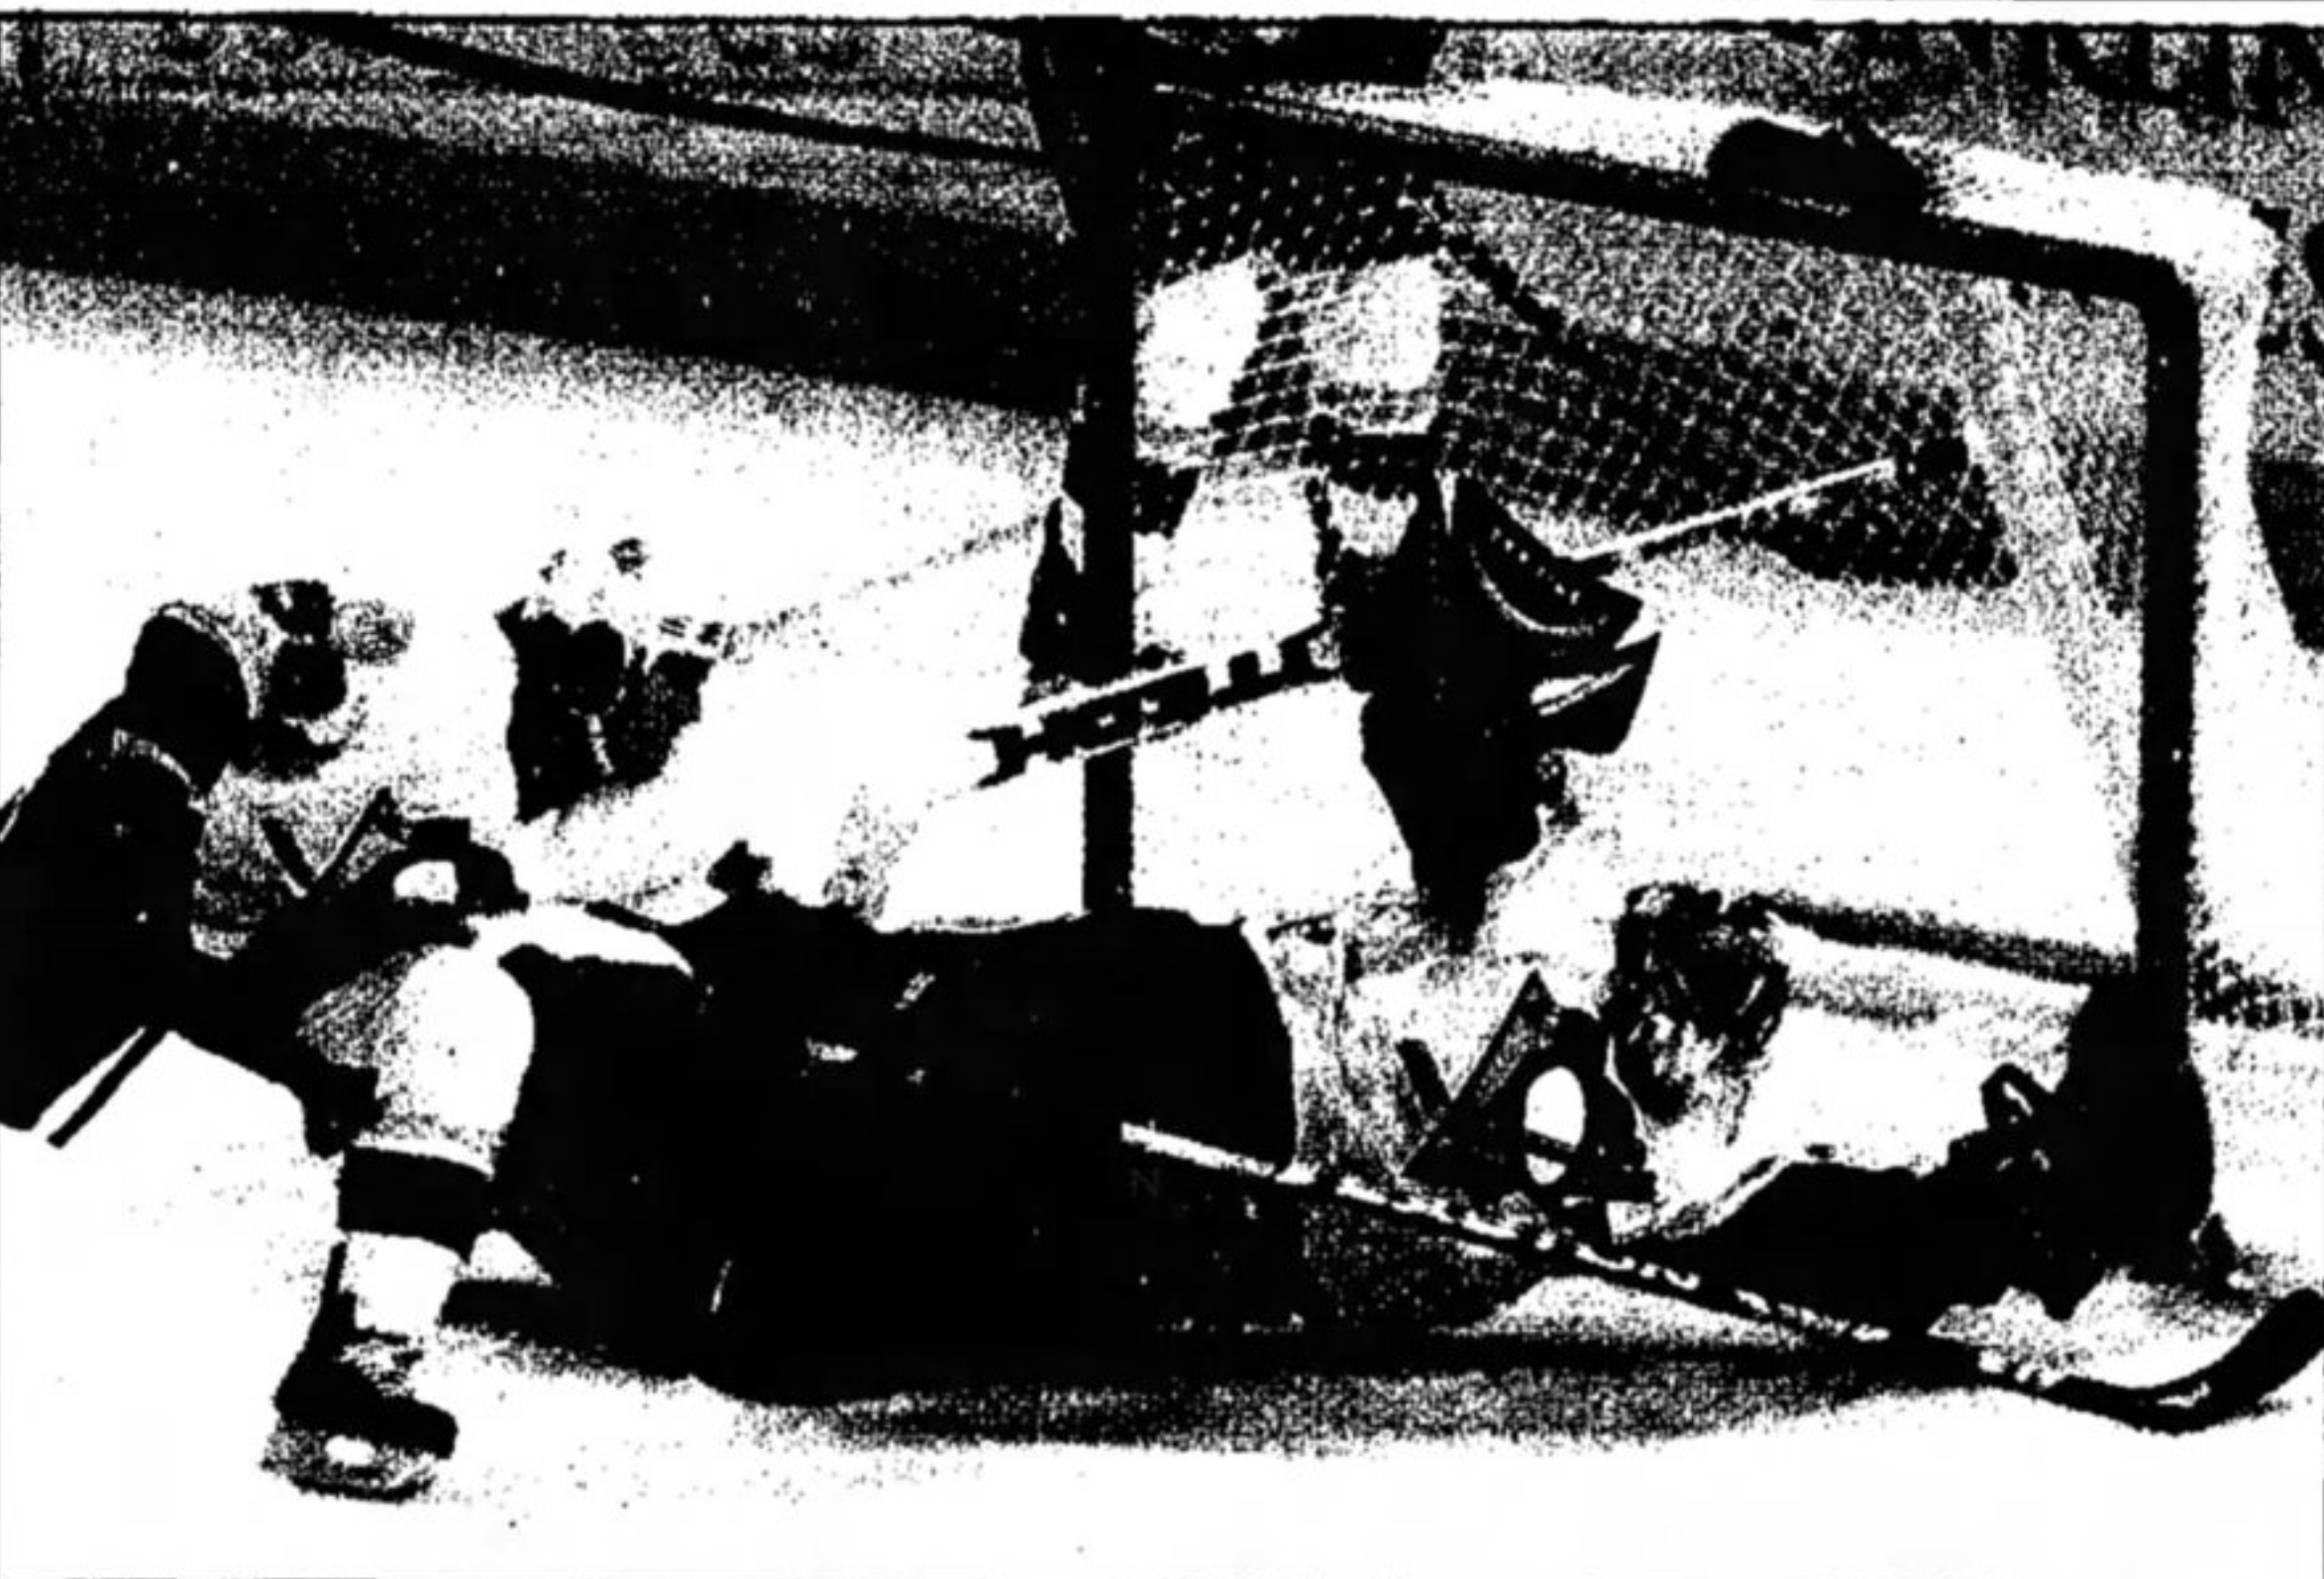

"It looks bad."

GAME NOTES: Chukwuedo led all scorers with 14 points ... Jade Stewart led Serra with seven points ... Popovich left the game early with a wrist or lower arm injury.

Conklin again sparkles as team ups winning streak to eight game.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Ty Conklin and the Pittsburgh Penguins kept two positive streaks going, and stopped a bad one in the process.

Conklin made 35 saves, Jordan Staal had two goals and an assist, and the Penguins extended their winning streak to eight games with a 4-1 victory over the Tampa Bay Lightning on Thursday night.

It's the Penguins' longest win streak since a 10-game stretch in January and February 1999. Pittsburgh also stopped a 12-game losing skid against Tampa Bay.

"I think everybody's confident," Conklin said. "It's not one or two guys, it's a team."

Conklin has won nine starts in a row, while Staal snapped a seven-game goal-scoring drought. Ryan Malone and Evgeni Malkin had third-period goals for Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh's previous win over Tampa Bay came on Jan. 17, 2003.

"I think all teams have pride, and whether it was guys who were here for it or weren't here for it, you don't want to have to talk about it every time either," Pittsburgh All-Star Sidney Crosby said. "For us, we want to be considered a good team at home and on the road. We don't want to be known for having bad games."

Paul Ranger scored for the Lightning, who have lost 11 of 13. Karri Ramo had 25 saves.

"We were trying to gain momentum, but I didn't think we played well enough to win," Tampa Bay coach John Tortorella said.

Crosby had his nine-game point streak end. He had 13 assists and 16 points over the stretch. Tampa Bay's Vincent Lecavalier, who will also be an All-Star starter, was held without a point.

"We both had some opportunities and didn't bury them," Lecavalier said.

Lecavalier had six shots. Crosby finished with four.

Staal's two second-period goals gave the Penguins a 2-1 lead. He redirected Petr Sykora's shot for a power-play goal to tie it at 12:11. The center then made it 2-1 from in close at 14:33 after Sykora sent the puck off the side of the net from the corner along the goal line.

"We had a great first and the second period was flat ... I don't know why," Lightning defenseman Shane O'Brien said.

Staal, who had 29 goals in his rookie campaign last season, has just five this season.

Ranger put the Lightning up 1-0 at 4:11 of the second. Conklin had been knocked to the ice and was on his back when Ranger scored.

Conklin stopped 13 shots in the first, including a diving save on Lecavalier's shot from the low right circle. Ramo turned aside Crosby's backhand, one of eight first-period saves.

"He's playing outstanding for us," Pittsburgh coach Michel Therrien said of Conklin. "That's a big surprise. He got a chance, he got an opportunity to be back in the NHL and he's certainly trying to take full advantage of it."

Tampa Bay had six shots during a 4-minute power play early in the third. Conklin stopped Martin St. Louis' backhand, and also got a break when Filip Kuba's shot from the left circle hit the post.

"It's frustrating," Kuba said. "It's how it's going right now for us."

Malone made it 3-1 on his goal with 2:39 left in the third. Malkin added an empty-netter with 11.5 seconds to go.

Ringgold girls stay hot

The Ringgold girls' basketball team boasts one of the top defenses in the WPIAL.

That's one of the main reasons the Lady Rams are among the WPIAL's hottest teams.

Ringgold finished the first half of Class AAA Section 4 play in first place at 5-0 with a 48-37 victory at West Allegheny Thursday to drop the losers into third place.

The Lady Rams' 11th straight win didn't come easy since Ringgold trailed 20-18 at halftime.

It was in the third quarter that the Lady Rams turned on their defense and turned off the Lady Indians.

Ringgold limited West Allegheny to six points when the Lady Rams took a 30-26 leads into the fourth quarter.

Alina Selby led Ringgold (12-2) with a game-high 16 points and also had six rebounds and five assists.

Selby also had plenty of support from Emily Schartner, Jennie Affinito and Tabitha Leach.

After failing to score in the first half, Affinito and Schartner both scored six points in the second half while Leach tallied seven of her nine points in the last 16 minutes.

Schartner had a strong all-around game with seven rebounds, six blocked shots, six steals and three assists.

Affinito contributed three assists and three steals with Leach, who missed only (See RINGGOLD, Page 2B)

Tomlin claims he was just playing to win the game

Steelers coach won't second-guess himself on two-point attempts.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers coach Mike Tomlin says if he had it to do all over again, he'd do it all over again.

Yes, he would again call for the two debatable two-point conversion tries. The decision to run the ball on the Steelers' failed final drive, which led to Jacksonville's winning field goal and the Jaguars' 31-29 AFC playoff victory on Saturday.

Yes, that Ben Roethlisberger rollout on third-and-6 from the Pittsburgh 26 with 2:56 to play and the Steelers up 29-28 would be repeated — even though a successful short pass play would have given them the opportunity to run out the clock.

Roethlisberger was stopped for only a 1-yard gain on a quarterback sweep to his left, a play that the Steelers rarely use but which still didn't fool Jaguars safety Sammy Knight. Roethlisberger threw for 337 yards and two scores and the Steelers ran for only 43 yards on 26 carries, yet they called three successive run plays on that final drive.

OK, Tomlin may be second-guessing that play-calling a little.

"Hindsight is 20-15 sometimes," Tomlin said at his end-of-season news conference Thursday. "If you had it to do over, yes, you would love to do that (throw the ball) because the result of the play was not the result we were looking for."

Tomlin's first season as an NFL head coach began well with records of 4-1 and 7-2 but ended with four losses in five games, including their first early round home playoff loss in 15 years.

That's why Tomlin took a few extra days before talking to reporters for one last time this season. "It was an emotional game," he said. "It was a gut-wrenching defeat, but every January defeat I have experienced has been the same."

Tomlin twice gambled by going for two points, rather than kicking the extra point, after the Steelers scored in the fourth quarter to get within 28-23 and again when they went ahead 29-28.

The first time, Tomlin stayed with the two-point conversion even after a holding call on center Sean Mahan pushed the Steelers back to the 12 yard line. On another debatable quarterback keeper, Roethlisberger was stopped at the 3.

"Yes, I'd do it again," Tomlin said. "I throw caution to the wind. I play to win."

Following their go-ahead touchdown four minutes later, the Steelers were trying to go up by 3 points so a field goal wouldn't beat them — which, of course, is exactly what happened when Josh Scobee kicked a 25-yarder with 37 seconds to play.

"We go up by one, there is no need of going up by two," Tomlin said.

On other issues, Tomlin said he:

■ Plans to retain all of his assistant coaches, although it is common for a first-year coach to reassess his staff and make changes.

"Do we need to get better? Do we need to coach better in some areas, all areas? Absolutely," he said.

■ Was concerned — and rightly so, as it proved — about his special teams even before the start of training camp.

As he watched film after being hired nearly a year ago, Tomlin said he realized losing

Patriots in playoff spotlight

Eight teams are in action this weekend.

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

After a week out of the spotlight, the New England Patriots are back in its glow. They're three games away from 19-0 and an NFL title, but one loss away from losing a lot of the luster a 16-0 regular season brought them.

That hasn't changed Bill Belichick.

"We've treated it one week at a time all year, so this week it's Jacksonville," the Patriots coach intones. "Each week has its own unique challenges and that's definitely true this week. I don't think any of those other games really have a whole lot of bearing on this one."

Same old song. New England rested last week, as did the other top seeds in the NFL's postseason festival: No. 2 Indy and the two top NFC teams, Dallas and Green Bay. They all face first-round winners in the latest test of whether it's better to have momentum or rest.

But the Patriots probably rested less than most.

Even in a bye week, Belichick always gives his players something to work on. That's in contrast to Dallas' Wade Phillips, who told his players to take three days off. So Tony Romo went to Mexico with his celebrity inamorata while the Patriots studied playbooks.

The Patriots have reason to believe that Saturday night's game will be difficult.

Normally, Jacksonville (12-5) depends on Maurice Jones-Drew and Fred Taylor, who was selected to his first Pro Bowl this week as an injury replacement — an honor long overdue. They combined for just 77 yards rushing in Pittsburgh, but Jones-Drew had a 96-yard kickoff return to set up a TD and a 43-yard score on a short pass from Garrard.

Jacksonville probably will have to open up its offense against a team that set a regular-season record with 589 points (almost 37 a game). That, of course, was due to league MVP Tom Brady, who set a record with 50 touchdown passes; Randy Moss, who had a record 23 TD catches; and Wes Welker, who tied for the NFL lead with 112 receptions.

SAN DIEGO (12-5) AT INDIANAPOLIS (13-3)
(1 P.M. EST SUNDAY)

There has been so much focus on the Patriots that the reigning champion Colts have been low-profile this season, something they don't mind at all. They've also had time to heal injured players, although Marvin Harrison, who's missed much of the season with a knee problem, is still uncertain.

Still, this team may be stronger defensively than any Tony Dungy has had with the Colts. And the offense has been without Harrison for so long that Peyton Manning has gotten used to working with new receivers, notably rookie Anthony Gonzalez.

San Diego also has a problem with one of its stars: TE Antonio Gates, who sprained his big toe last week and is day to day.

The Chargers started 1-3 under Norv Turner, but go to Indy with a seven-game winning streak, including last week's 17-6 first-round victory over Tennessee — one more playoff win than the departed Marty Schottenheimer had with last season's 14-2 team.

The Chargers beat the Colts 23-21 in San Diego on Nov. 11 in a fluky game.

Manning threw six interceptions, San Diego got TDs on punt and kickoff returns by Darren Sproles, and yet the Colts should have won. Adam Vinatieri, the best clutch kicker in NFL history, missed a 29-yard field goal with 1:31 left.

NEW YORK GIANTS (11-6) AT DALLAS (13-3)
(4:30 P.M. SUNDAY)

These teams have played 91 times, although this is the first time they've met in the playoffs.

The Cowboys won both regular-season meetings: 45-35 on opening night and 31-20 at the Meadowlands on Nov. 11. That loss in Dallas is the last time the Giants were beaten on the road. They have won eight straight, including a 24-14 win in Tampa last week, their first playoff victory since they beat Minnesota to go to the Super Bowl following the 2000 season.

They also have more momentum than the Cowboys, who lost two of their last three and got those days off earlier this month. Dallas hasn't won a postseason game since 1996.

Romo, whose relationship with Jessica Simpson seems to interest folks more than his on-field activities, finished poorly: one touchdown and five interceptions in his last two regular-season games. The maligned Eli Manning was much better for the Giants with six TDs and one interception combined in the Tampa Bay win and the near-miss 38-35 loss to New England in the regular-season closer.

Dallas' most pressing problem is the health of Terrell Owens, who has a high ankle sprain. He has practiced this week, but Phillips says his status is a game-time decision. Terry Glenn, out almost all season with knee problems, could help fill the hole, but he could be rusty.

SEATTLE (11-6) AT GREEN BAY (13-3)
(4:30 P.M. SATURDAY)

Mike Holmgren, who won a Super Bowl coaching the Packers, points to last season's overtime loss to eventual NFC champion Chicago to demonstrate why his Seahawks are equipped to play in cold weather.

"No one gave us the slightest chance to even come close and we played a very fine football game; lost the football game, but played a good game and had a chance," he says. "We know the challenges, but it kind of gets you going. It kind of gets the juices flowing a little bit to say, 'OK, here's what we're up against now. Let's see what we can do.' That's a healthy thing. That's a good thing."

The key for Seattle will be to get a rush on Brett Favre. Patrick Kerney was second in the NFL with 14 1/2 sacks and the Seahawks were fourth overall with 45. But traction at Lambeau Field could be a problem; a wet or slippery field often causes defenses as many problems as it causes offenses.

Seattle QB Matt Hasselbeck was once Favre's backup. And in a 2004 playoff game in Green Bay, he was caught by a microphone after the overtime coin flip saying: "We want the ball and we're going to score!"

Bucs break ground on Dominican site

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates will break ground on their new baseball academy in the Dominican Republic on Jan. 22.

The academy will be built on a 46-acre site in El Toro recently purchased by the team. It will serve as the headquarters for the Pirates' Latin American operations and as the base for their Dominican Summer League team.

The Pirates decided to build the academy after team officials found their current Dominican Republic camp to be inadequate.

"This new facility and our renewed commitment to the international markets are critically important to achieving our goal of building a ballclub that can compete on a regular basis," principal owner Bob Nutting said.

Last season, former Pirates reliever Salomon Torres said the club reneged on a promise to rent one of two training camps he built in the Dominican Republic. Torres now rents his complexes to the Texas Rangers and Atlanta Braves.

Torres subsequently withdrew a grievance he filed, charging he accepted less money in his current contract in exchange for the Pirates' pledge to rent his camp. Torres has since been traded to Milwaukee.

Ringgold skaters blank Trinity, 8-0

Sean Whiten scored five goals in Ringgold's 8-0 hockey win over Trinity Thursday.

Andy Tabory, Erik Vogt and Nicolas Scabollini had the other goals for the Rams (5-9).

Goalie Dustin Tanner made 30 saves for the shutout.

Jones' sentencing scheduled today

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Disgraced Olympian Marion Jones is asking a federal judge to keep her out of prison, but the only real question may be how much time she gets.

Jones, who apologized, retired and gave up her five Olympic medals after admitting she lied about steroids and a check-fraud scheme, was to be sentenced today by U.S. District Judge Kenneth Karas in White Plains.

Her lawyers have told the judge that Jones has been punished enough and should be sentenced only to probation, or perhaps be confined to her home. Prosecutors are not insisting on prison time either, saying any sentence between probation and six months would be fair.

But Karas hinted that he was focused on incarceration when he asked the lawyers to advise him about whether he could go beyond the six-month maximum that was suggested in her plea deal. He also wanted to know whether he could sentence Jones separately for the steroids and check fraud convictions. Both sides advised against it.

Outland Trophy to LSU's Dorsey

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — After capping his college career earlier in the week with a national title, LSU tackle Glenn Dorsey was properly sent off by his former Tigers defensive coordinator, new Nebraska coach Bo Pelini.

Pelini, who coached the Tigers' defense in LSU's 38-24 victory over Ohio State in the BCS national championship game Monday night, introduced Dorsey before the tackle accepted the Outland Trophy as the nation's best interior lineman.

When the player finally came face-to-face with his coach at a reception before the dinner, the pair embraced in a half-hug and joked heartily as they posed for pictures with passing fans.

Ovechkin gets record NHL pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alex Ovechkin was unshaved and his mop of hair was in dire need of a comb. He did, however, make one concession after signing the richest contract in NHL history.

He wore a suit. Stashed away were his bizarre color-clashing getups that would make Mr. Blackwell cringe.

"Well," he said with a shrug, "I'm still looking good."

Of course he is. He has a $124 million, 13-year contract extension with the Washington Capitals, a handsome reward for the charismatic, 22-year-old Russian who has been a nonstop goal-scorer since coming to the NHL in 2005.

"I'm happy I stay here," Ovechkin said. "It's my second home. I like the fans. I like the team. I like everything here."

It's not the longest deal in NHL history — Rick DiPietro signed for 15 years with the New York Islanders — and it didn't break the record for largest average salary, but it is the league's first contract to guarantee nine digits of income.

"I'm a risk-taker," said owner Ted Leonsis, who has made Ovechkin the cornerstone of a rebuilding plan to restore the Capitals as a perennial playoff team. "And if you're going to make a long-term investment, who else would you do it with? This takes away any of the issues of how committed we are to winning a Cup, how committed we are to keeping a team together."

The contract will pay Ovechkin $9 million per year for the first six years and $10 million per year for the following seven. A limited-movement clause kicks in after several years that will allow Ovechkin to select a handful of teams at the beginning of each season to which he cannot be traded.

And he won't have to pay an agent a dime. Ovechkin worked out the details himself Thursday afternoon in negotiations with Leonsis and general manager George McPhee. His parents, Tatiana and Mikhail, were also in town for the final round of talks for a deal that runs through the 2020-21 season.

The No. 1 overall pick in the 2004 draft, Ovechkin was in the final season of a three-year, entry-level deal. His salary-cap number for this season, taking into account bonuses, is $3.83 million.

Skating champ Bowman dies of possible overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. figure skating champion Christopher Bowman pleased fans and fellow skaters with his flair on the ice. But he was also known for his off-the-ice struggles with drugs and alcohol and other personal problems.

Now the 40-year-old former skating champ known as "Bowman the Showman" has been found dead at a budget hotel in the San Fernando Valley, and authorities say a drug overdose could be to blame.

Bowman was pronounced dead Thursday at 12:06 p.m., said Coroner's Lt. Joe Bale, who confirmed the death was being investigated as a possible drug overdose, but wasn't immediately able to provide more details. An autopsy was planned for this weekend, he said.

Bowman's body was found by a friend Thursday morning at a Budget Inn in the North Hills area, police Sgt. Francisca Wheeling said. A desk clerk who answered the phone at the hotel late Thursday declined comment.

"He just passed away in his sleep," Bowman's mother, Joyce, told the Detroit Free Press.

special teams players such as Sean Morey, Mike Logan and Chidi Iwuoma would be a major setback. Also, linebacker James Harrison became a starter and didn't play as much on special teams.

"I wasn't interested in throwing up a red flag and saying, 'Hey, I am worried about special teams,' but obviously I was," Tomlin said. "A special teams unit is comprised of four or five core guys ... It would be the equivalent of losing seven, eight, nine starters on an offensive or defensive unit."

Kick coverage must improve next season, he said, but there "are not enough dynamic playmakers that you can build a core unit around."

■ Thinks the Steelers currently are "a good team. That's what 10-6 teams are, what division champions are. We've got to be great."

■ Is convinced the offensive and defensive lines most need an infusion of younger players.

"The protection of our quarterback has to improve," Tomlin said, referring to the 47 sacks of Roethlisberger.

■ Hasn't written off losing All-Pro guard Alan Faneca,

Hines Ward has surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steelers wide receiver Hines Ward underwent surgery to repair a partially torn meniscus in his right knee and will need about six weeks of recovery time before beginning offseason workouts.

The surgery was done Wednesday, but was not disclosed until coach Mike Tomlin's season-ending news conference Thursday.

Ward missed three games this season because of the injury, including the Dec. 30 game at Baltimore. He returned to make a game-high 10 catches for 135 yards in the Steelers' 31-29 AFC playoff loss to Jacksonville on Saturday.

Until this season, Ward had missed only three games due to injury during his 10-season NFL career. Ward has a team record 719 career catches.

Tomlin said Pro Bowl safety Troy Polamalu may need surgery on his right knee, but will wait to see if rest cures the problem.

who can become a free agent, but "maybe the door is closing."

■ Isn't confident that the Steelers will be big players in free agency and believes most of their new players will arrive in the draft.

"When you have quality, you have to pay for that," he said.

■ Said his first season as a head coach didn't go "as well as I would have liked."

"One of the things that has bugged me since Saturday night are people with great intentions saying, 'Great start' and 'great year,' " he said. "I appreciate that, but I am not wired like that. Not that I am a negative guy, a melancholy guy. ... (But) there is something we are chasing here and we never will cease that chase."

■ Wouldn't disclose, for now, whether the Steelers will eventually switch from a 3-4 defense to a 4-3. He also wouldn't say if he favors yanking up Heinz Field's often-mushy grass and putting down artificial turf.

FEATURES

PROJECT OF THE WEEK

Chest instant classic

A natural for any decor, this elegant lingerie chest project will become an heirloom for generations to come.

Its combination of clean lines and a sturdy and simple design make it an instant classic.

Built from 15 board feet of maple and three sheets of matching veneer plywood (as pictured; other species will also work), the chest features a generous top — just right for fresh flowers, photographs or a jewelry box — over seven large drawers.

Designed to hold lingerie, fine knits and other delicacies, the drawers travel on precision slides to ensure smooth, quiet operation.

Despite its sophisticated appearance, the project is easy enough for most woodworkers. Step-by-step instructions and detailed diagrams simplify building the cabinet and aligning the drawers.

Although careful measuring and cutting are required, construction is simple: cut out the pieces, assemble everything with glue and nails, add finish and install the hardware.

The completed lingerie chest measures about 27 inches wide by 17 inches deep by 59 inches tall.

The Lingerie Chest plan, No. 874, is $9.95 and includes complete step-by-step directions with photos, isometric drawings, construction diagrams, a shopping list and cutting layout and a toll-free help line for project questions.

Lingerie chest

A package of jewelry and lingerie furniture plans, No. C144, is $24.95 and includes this plan plus plans for a jewelry and lingerie chest and a jewelry box.

A free catalog picturing dozens of do-it-yourself projects is also available.

Please include $4 for postage and handling and allow about two weeks for delivery.

Dennis Quaid, wife rip Cedars-Sinai hospital

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dennis Quaid and his wife denounced the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center over a "lack of candor" about medical errors they believe caused their newborn twins to receive overdoses of a blood thinner.

The couple indicated they were particularly upset to learn from a state investigation that their babies were given dosages of heparin that were 2,000 times stronger than what was prescribed.

The report's findings released Wednesday by the California Department of Public Health conflict with the hospital's initial report that the children each received one vial containing 10,000 units per milliliter of heparin instead of the common dosage of 10 units per milliliter. The report found the children actually received two of the vials.

"We find it outrageous and totally unacceptable that we are learning for the first time... exactly what transpired," the actor and his wife, Kimberly, said in a statement to the Los Angeles Times.

"The hospital's lack of candor has left us with the uneasy feeling that we may never know the whole story," the statement said.

The hospital has previously issued an apology to the patients' families and said it has taken steps to provide more training to staff and review all policies and procedures involving high-risk medication.

Your Path Forward

CAPRICORN VS

SATURDAY, JAN. 12, 2008

An important undertaking may head off in a direction you don't anticipate in the year ahead, but instead of getting upset, let events have their own way. Everything will work out far better for you than they would if done your way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - The control of something important may be taken out of your hands and given to another. It will cause much more problems for you if you get haughty about it. Let it out itself out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) - Unexpected pressure from your peers may cause you to act in a manner that does not serve your best interests. Instead of being indignant or acting dictatorial, find a way to hold firm without losing your dignity.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) - If those with whom you share your time feel you are being far too self-serving, they won't hesitate to pressure you to cool it. Make sure your behavior is justified before you start rebelling or pointing fingers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) - Someone who is quite clever about getting you to reveal things that are confidential will be up to his/her old tricks, so be on guard and don't talk about anything that would let the cat out of the bag.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) - Rewards for hard work will be coming your way. Someone who was present but didn't make any contribution may have his/her hand out to grab a share of what you accomplished. Don't be a patsy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) - You have a strong need to exercise your independence and will resent being bossed around by those who are interfere with your plans. You won't hesitate to give them their marching orders.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) - Look for all those unfinished tasks or assignments you've been sweeping under the rug to rear their ugly heads when something more important needs done. Sadly, you'll have to incorporate them into your plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) - You'll be judged more for your sportsmanship than how well you play the game, so be a good sport. Whether you win or lose, do so with as much grace as you can muster.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) - An engagement you have may be far more important to you than it is to your mate or someone with whom you share your time. Be understanding if this person doesn't want to participate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) - You generally have little problem getting along with almost anybody, but when a know-it-all enters the picture, it may be more than you can tolerate. Unfortunately, characters of this ilk will exceed your tolerance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) - Where you are apt to experience a bit more stress at this time is in areas that affect your material interaction with others. A misunderstanding might arise that could easily be blown out of proportion and cause a brouhaha.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) - Those who are normally on your side and usually don't offer any kind of opposing position might be uncooperative. Should some unexpected resistance occur, analyze your behavior or action to figure out the reason.
